JOINT.

The Charge Against Three Chinese Residents of the City.

THE PLACE RAIDED BY THE POLICE

Something of the Onium Habit in Houston-Its Habitues Are Found Among All Classes.

Three of the Celectial residents of Houstoo, they of the almond eye and the flowing quene, have been made defendants in the corporation court on charges of maintaining a "hop joint." Lest there be those not sufficiently versed in street vernacular to understand what the above offense implies, it runy be explained in the beginning of the chapter that a hop foliat is an opinin den, where customers, for a small consideration, may "bit the pipe" to their heart's content. This explanation will save paragraph stars and marginal references.

The defendants are the two Keng brothers and one Quong, and they were placed under arrest after a raid by Officer Proctor and two brother officers of a restaurant on into Bideous shapes that shrick and gliber in the gathering groun. The defining deepens. Show comes drifting to the carth, but it is as black as the clouds that give a birth. The sleener reposes mean a bard bed on the rocky shore. It is night on the trackless deep in front of blue the tempest is unchalmed and the strong bark shives and the stong masts crock and reel at the whirtwind's breath. The staggering bills are drunk. The man out in the spray and the stony is cold, freezing, yet consumed by thirst. Paradles has been lost, in company with a myriad of devile be bovers on by thirst. Paradise has been lost. In company with a myriad of devile be hovers on the brink of hell. He is bound by hery fetters. Globes of secting fire volt around and absentable. Jets of violet colored figure-pour forth from ruby crossed volcances. Rivers of fire run all about him and with deafening roar rush, along over crystal spars and crags of peaci until with wild leans they less themselves to a sail breader and deeper than ten Magarins.

And the "hop field" awakes to find himself an immate of the police station.

THE LOCAL STAGE.

Herrmann the Magician Draws a Good

Audience to the Opera House. The great and only Herrmann" drew good crowd to the opers house has night despite the bad weather, and the promise of "magic, mirth and mystery" was very music, except that given by the oreliestra, the better. While Herrinara II is by no means the equal of Herrmann I, he gave means the squal of Herrmann I, he gave some very clever specimens of what could be done with diginal dexterity and mechanical constituency. The clock and the bowla of water with fish swimming about in them were two of the prelibest tricks shown and in handling the Japanese rings, this Herrmann was as expert and clever so the hest of them. He was noticeably awkward, nowever, in many of the smaller tricks, nimest quite giving himself awar several times during the evening. One very funay feature of the evening was the Nosh's ark trick. The stage furnished a very annuang pleture with all the chickens, guineas, ducks, etc., that had been so carefully packed in the ends of the ark, stretching their wings in relief at being released. One adventurous rooster of "frying size" was separated from the rest by the depping of the curtain, but was not much embarrassed at the situation, but callely fell to work esting a few beans that had been used by the professor during the creating. He was finally elptined, however, and presumably put to roost.

The vanderlike brought down the house, but the fine was very desidedly broad and correct Mr. McWatter's lightning changed were quite chover, and his personations were good. Miss Grace Tyson was uproariously encored by the galleries. This is a remarkably prestry woman, with a menth capable of expendent great enough to sait the most arident inperialist, and her facial play was remarkable. Her voice is found, strident and exceedingly unpleasant, but she thensed the gols in the gallery, and would doubtless always draw a crowd.
